Dear Monty,

Apologies for the delay in writing this testimonial – I wanted to find out how I felt a few months later after writing my will.

I am pleased to say that I feel much more at ease now that I have sorted out my Will – it was something I was meaning to do since 2000 when I first set up my own business but have never got around to it...

It was not until you explained that being single – if I was to die without a will half of my estate would go to Mum and the other half to my father – that I made a decision to write one immediately. I had to avoid my father getting any share of my estate. This was the most crucial bit of information I gained from my meeting.

I was also impressed with the easy style used to actually extract the information from me as to what I really wanted to happen. It made me really think through the impact of what I was doing. I quickly came to realise that writing a will, is not as straight forward as some people are led to believe with the do it yourself packs available from WHS Smiths !

I have since been urging my brothers to make an appointment so they too can have their wills sorted – as most have assets but more importantly they have children also.

The upshot from it all has been quite surprising – now that I have assigned my estate I have to build it up such that it leaves substantial sums that will make a difference. Doing my will has resulted in a new focus and direction and a realization that actually we don't have enough time !

With best regards
